WELCOME TO

RIVERWALK

A scenic walk along the Mississippi River in historic downtown Almonte, Ontario.

HISTORICALLY, the Mississippi River was a travel route used by Aboriginal peoples and a catalyst for industry. Now the river's value rests in its natural beauty, recreational opportunities, and green power generation. By leading visitors through beautiful natural areas, historic sites, and businesses, the Riverwalk links our past to our future.

Along the way are stunning views of the Mississippi River as it weaves its way beneath the train bridge and past Kirkland Park, to a fabulous lookout by the Victoria Woollen Mill that offers a breathtaking view of the falls. From there, the Riverwalk crosses Almonte Street and continues to another lookout at the new power plant overlooking Metcalfe Park and the lower falls. Most of the walk is relatively easy, with attractive benches located along the path for relaxing, bird watching, and taking in the beauty of the river.

The Riverwalk was made possible through the generous support of the Federal Economic Development Agency for Southern Ontario, as well as contributions from local supporters, matched by the Town of Mississippi Mills. Numerous volunteers helped with the planning and development of the Riverwalk, making it an outstanding and unique community asset.

Parking for the Riverwalk is available at several points indicated on the map below. The bridge and path network is designed for use by walkers and those with disabilities.
